It's unbelievable that there will be consideration of a pay raise for the do-nothing legislature that we have in this state.

At the current $79,500 they already make plus the add ons from chairmanships and other goodies that almost all of them get, they are already way overpaid for doing practically nothing with their legislative time.

If anything, they should be getting a reduction in pay and a big one. Most of them get their faces into the public trough and never take them out. Face it; it's a part time job. I was an activist (unpaid) there for 8 years and saw first hand how the legislature could't care less what the public thinks. There were a few and I mean few who actually wanted to do something constructive, but they really had no voice. If this commission recommends a pay raise then the commission members should be punished. Legislators rarely worked more than three days a week in Albany. Talking about a raise for them should be a crime at this juncture.
